To whom it may concern.

We used SB Projects for the relocation of a very valuable heritage item from our old library to the recently constructed new facility on the other side of the campus. The relocation works consisted of the complete transfer of the wall linings, windows, doors and frames of the original Governor Lachlan Macquarie parlour room that was originally transferred from Scotland to Australia in the late 1960's. This involved the creation of a glazed enclosure within the foyer of new library and a self supporting structure to support the wall linings combined with the painstaking task of individually labelling each and every strip of the cedar wall lining to ensure that they were able to be relocated and erected in the same exact configuration.

The programme for the works was very tight to coincide with the official opening of the library and there were budget problems from the start. SB Projects were able to find significant costs savings while maintaining the integrity of the overall design and delivered the project within the time frame and on budget.

I would have no hesitation in recommending SB Projects for works of this nature in the future.
